

Gerardo D'Orrico

Excessive and Rapid Changes

<https://beneinst.eu/>

Copyright © 2024 Beneinst.eu | All rights reserved

Humans present themselves as repositories of deep intrinsic knowledge, trapped within symmetrical structures. However, careful observation reveals the fragile nature of humanity. It is not a reason for compassion, as it is uncertain whether individuals can ever come to a complete understanding of themselves. Individuals manifest as fragments of a heterogeneous mosaic. In consideration of this, we can explore an intriguing perspective. I invite conversation about the extraordinary essence of the sunny day that awaits us.

In accordance with the theme of free will, dissent emerges as a key concept. When an idea is emitted into the ether, it may return like a boomerang. The gaps in our perception of the universe can be likened to missing flavors in an ice cream parlor, with the awareness that, ultimately, there is always an answer.

The responsibility to give meaning and define reality is entirely entrusted to the individual. Extending the gaze, it is possible to glimpse the course of existence, as, in many contexts, expressing one's beliefs represents the first step to owning them. Resolution may lie beyond the threshold of one's dwelling or in the perpetual mystery of the future, which, from a linguistic perspective, can be interpreted as an invitation to heresy, to be followed without constraints of place.

There seems to be a profound fracture between individuality and the external world. Directives prescribe avoiding both retrospection and introspection, to steer clear of the risk of establishing obscure and incomprehensible communications. If one decides to scrutinize a photograph in detail, it is suggested to do so until the limit is reached, avoiding the onset of frustration. Peace cannot be considered a harm, even in the presence of deep silence.

The world itself reveals itself as an enigma, despite manifesting in all its splendor before our eyes. The impact of issues generated today and the behavior we must adopt to ensure the continuity of our existence remain obscure. Yet, we cannot help but recognize the subtle invisible interferences, the viruses that infiltrate our quiet turmoils, and the prolonged ignorances that characterize this glorious year zero eleven. Truth, even if seemingly as clear as a May day of a bygone era, still reveals itself, like an apparition in a desert where it is unclear whether one is gaining a preserved life.

Life, regardless of what our minds unveil, remains an enigma. It is not possible to predict the number of problems that have been generated today or define the actions necessary to ensure survival. Issues may appear clear, yet they are often misconstrued, while doubt remains ever-present. Clarity plays a fundamental role in contemporary communications, as does the word "clear."

In the vast panorama of knowledge disseminated in our region, obstacles loom as dominators of the situation. These obstacles arise from obscure sources, and sometimes it is necessary to suspend action, reflect, and restore balance, much like allowing oneself a pause to quench thirst. Life may appear vastly different from what was imagined, but often it is merely a matter of interpretation. It is not surprising that words lose meaning in situations where our presence, in fact, is never relevant.

Furthermore, the authentic meanings of words, even from a legal standpoint, can vary considerably. The possibility that our future is encapsulated only in the memories of the front pages, perhaps in a book written by an unknown author, is not to be underestimated. Silence manifests like the wind, an entity that neither confirms nor denies our existence. We are almost transparent in the ether, representing a reality that perhaps has never been.

Gerardo D'Orrico

Contatti:

SitoWeb | Facebook | Pinterest | YouTube | WhatsApp